

I want to talk to you about my studies and January activities.

I'm almost done with my final exam; one week remains. In addition, I would like to share with you my managerial philosophies. The instructor intends to hold a fundraising function. It sounds fantastic! It's also a fascinating class, to boot. I have a good understanding of the management function and team leadership, particularly the various roles and duties within the firm or organization. There was a presentation as well, and my group's topic was human resources. The fact that both my teacher and classmates gave my group a lot of attention is astounding. Regarding the English 2 class, it is very great for me. We have a lot of fun in the class; the teacher always has activities in class, so I do not feel bored anymore. And in this class, my group got a high score and was the only group. I learned a lot about professional and technical skills, such as how to use the program. For the Cultural Anthropologist class, I learned about the culture of Cambodia and also other cultures, like why cultures change. Or where does culture come from? Even though I am Cambodian, I do not understand all the Khmer culture or Khmer transitional. The class also has a trip, but I did not go because the NGO has an annual meeting. It is ok for me, and for those who did not go on the trip, the teacher provided the assignment to do. For the TDSO class, I just finished the exam, and it was good. It is a very active class. We always read the book after we start the class.

One other was that I took part in the Bannalay event in Siem Reap. There is a book show there. It was a great day, and I had fun at the event. We had a fantastic talk, I made new acquaintances, and I met new individuals. Many activities are planned for the event, including book lectures, traditional dances, painting, a drawing show, traditional music, and performances of music, traditional dances, and singing by schools for the disabled. This event is incredible. Students from other schools, including the various primary schools, have also been invited. They came along and had fun doing the activities with us. I can't wait to get started on this exercise; it's relaxing and happy.

One more thing, I participated as a project volunteer. I got new experiences and met new guests, Diana's family. I just exchanged ideas with others when I joined the activities with the guests. I participated in planting trees with Project T, bike donations to the students with Project B, and a floating village with Diana's family. It was a great time for me to practice and build my communication skills and confidence. I love to participate in Project V activities because I can enjoy them and stress out.

Last but not least, I would like to say thank you so much for always supporting me and giving me some advice. I appreciate you taking the time to read my email.
